

Turning a one-page site into a storefront that runs itself

How an independent music producer's site became a fully automated beat store, tiered licensing, instant delivery, and organic search traffic included.

Industry Music production / e-commerce

Scope Ongoing

THE PROBLEM

The business was real, people wanted to buy beats, but the site wasn't built to sell or deliver them without manual work.

No structured way to sell the same beat under different license tiers

Every purchase meant manually sending files to the buyer

No bulk-discount logic for running promotions

Almost no organic search traffic, everything depended on social

THE SYSTEM

WHAT I BUILT

01

Full site build

Designed and built the storefront in WordPress and Elementor: a browsable, playable beat catalog, a mixing and mastering upsell, and a custom-beat request page.

02

Tiered licensing & cart system

Starter, Semi-Pro, Unlimited, and Exclusive licenses on every beat, with automatic bulk-discount logic across the whole catalog.

03

Automated order fulfillment

Purchases trigger automatic file delivery and confirmation, so no one has to manually send a file again.

04

SEO & organic growth

On-page SEO and content work to bring in search traffic in a niche that mostly competes on social media.

THE RESULT

Sells around the clock

Licensing, checkout, and delivery all run without anyone touching them.

Promotions scale themselves

Bulk discounts apply automatically, no manual cart math for every sale.

Found in search, not just social

Real organic visibility instead of depending entirely on social and marketplace traffic.

HOW I WORK

1

Map the funnel

Walked through how a visitor actually becomes a buyer, and where it was breaking down.

2

Build on your platform

Everything built directly in WordPress, no proprietary lock-in, so the site is fully owned.

3

Test real purchases

Every license tier and discount rule tested with real transactions before going live.

4

Hand over clearly

Documented so the site can be run and extended without me in the loop.

ALSO DONE FOR OTHER CLIENTS

Alongside CRM and marketing automation work, I take on full website projects, e-commerce and content sites that need to actually convert and run themselves.
